TAYLOR'S TOMB.

Comrades Should Visit It While at Louisville

EDITOR NATIONAL TRIBUNE: In view of the fact that the next National Encampment will be held at Louisville, Ky., it may be of interest to the comrades, as well as others who attend, to know that Gen. Zachary Taylor's tomb and monument are located four miles east of that city. I was in Louisville the 1st of May, and concluded I would visit the grave of the hero of Beuna Vista. I made inquiries of some of the old residents of the city about the pose, locality and the facilities for getting there, and was very much astonished at the ignorance manifested by men who had lived in the city all their lives. They all seemed to know the General was buried east of the city, but were profoundly ignorant of the exact locality or the route. I finally got a young business man of the town to accompany me in a buggy. When we were ready to start I met an old comrade, a resident of the city. He said he could not give me the information I wanted, but if I would go to the City Hall the Chief of Police could give me all the information I needed, because he was a grandson of the General. However, we had become skeptical by this time, and our time was limited, and we thought it just possible the grandson had forgotten where his great an- and 27. cestor was buried. So we dove out Main street to the suburb of Clifton, and when we came to the tellgate we inquired of the old lady who kept the gate. She said we were on the Harrodsburg road; we would have to cross over at the reservoir to the Brownsboro road. Although she never saw the monument, she thought it was eight or nine miles out on that road. We thanked her and drove on as directed, and about three miles from the tollgate we came in might of the monument a quarter of a mile from the Brownsboro pike, in a family graveyard on the old Taylor farm.

The monument stands about one rod south of the tomb, or wault, where the General is buried. The vault is closed with a very rusty fron door, on which is the simple inscription, was only three miles away. The young business man who accompanied me has lived in the city five years; he expressed himself as well pleased with the excursion, but said he would probably never have visited the monument had I not persuaded him to accompany me. How soon even the great men of this Nation pass out of our memory. When I was five years of age this great General was so popular in the United States that his praises were indellibly impressed even on my infant memory. But after 45 years of silence in the tomb even those living near have annual Reunion at Meadville, Thursday, June forgotten that a great though modest hero is buried there. I hope some one will be patriotic enough to decorate his tomb on each Memorial Day.-Jasper Brown, Evans' Landing, Ind.

VETERANS, ATTENTION

The Widow of Admiral Dahlgren Appeals to You, Comrades, to Establish the War Record of Ulric Dahlgren, Reported Missing by the War Department-The Record of the Typical Boy Hero of the War-Made a Colonel at 20, and Died in a Gallant Attempt to Rescue Union Soldiers Captive at Libby and Belle Isle-Scenes on Memorial Day the Country Over.

VETERANS, ATTENTION ! The appeal of Mrs. Madeleine Vinton Dahlgren, widow of Admiral Dahlgren, "The gallant old Admiral Lashed to the mast," addressed to the veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic, will touch a responsive chord in every comrade's heart. Who will answer for the record of any soldier of the Union when the War Department fails to produce the record of the gallant young here, Ulric Dahlgren, whom Lincoln and Stanton commissioned Colonel before the age of 20, for special gallantry while serving on the staff of Sigel and "Fighting Joe" Hooker? Col. Dahlgren's exploits were daring and conspicuous in all the conflicts in which he was engaged, especially at Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Greencastle, Hagerstown, and the brilliant cavalry fighting of the eight days wounded in his gallant assaults, and Hagerstown nearly cost him a leg. From this almost fatal wound he was just ill-fated Government expedition planned by Gen. Kilpatrick. The duty assigned him was to surprise Richmond, free the Union prisoners in Libby and Belle Isle, burn the Government buildings, and make way for the entrance of C. T., Farge, writes: "John F. Reynolds Post, the main body, 3,500 men, his own command composing 500.

Owing to a furious storm, continuing for days, the advance-guard and the main body became separated. Col. Dahlgren was surprised and killed by a night ambuscade, and his men captured or scattered. His body, stripped of its clothing and terribly mutilated, was buried at Richmond, but after many months was returned to Washington and given military

The spirit in which Col. Dahlgren entered upon the Richmond expedition is shown in a letter addressed to his father, Admiral Dahlgren, under date of Feb. 26, 1864, in which he said : "If successful, it will be the grandest thing on record; and if it fails, many of us will 'go up.' I may be captured or 'tumbled over,' I should be ashamed to show my face again . a s If we do not return, there is no better place to give up the ghost,"

This letter was written Feb. 26, and on March 2 the valiant young spirit had departed to be with the immortals. Poets and historians have recorded his unselfish deeds, and memoir of his son written by Admiral Dahlgren, and published by the Lippincotts in 1872, a circumstantial account of the war services of the boy Colonel, who died one month before he had attained his majority, is given in detail.

O life so pure! O faith so sure! O heart so brave, and true, and stron With tips of flame is writ your name, In annaled deeds and storied song!

So says the poet, giving no thought to Government record. No, the Grand Army of the Republic must do this. There are 13 Dahlgren Posts in the great soldier Order, some of them Ulric Dahlgren, it is learned. "I have written this address to the Grand Army," Mrs. Dahlgren says; " for who else can better protect its own." It is hoped the subject may be taken up by the next National Encampment, and such steps taken as may be necessary to restore the lost records of Col. Dahlgren, and right a great

Comrade Redington left thousands of his songs in my care, which I have distributed all over blue, and 25 little boys, carrying flags, gave the city, and the children are singing them the American Patriotic Flag Salute and joined in the procession. No prettier or more patriotic every where.

The next thing which should command the attention of the W.R.C. in St. Louis is to endeavor to do away with amusements of any character on this day. I was horrified to see great posters on the fences advertising " Memorial Sweepstakes" and " Decoration Prizes" at the races for the 30th of May. This desecration must be stopped! There is to be an excursion and basket picnic to St. James on June 30 to visit the site selected for the Soldiers' Home. There are 800 fruit trees on the place, literally loaded. There will be church services for those who care to attend and spend the day quietly. The month of May was replete with commemorations of our gallant dead. Generally the Posts and Corps dufted, tending to make these affairs large and attractive. While there has been a mingling of the blue and gray on Memorial Day to some extent, it would he well for us to remember that there was a wrong and right side. One of Missouri's Past Presidents horrified us one day by declaring that "the rebels had a right to wear their flag if they wanted to." I believe this lady was not in the country during the war, and had no relative in it. While I believe in forgiving, a wholesome memory is a good thing to cultivate. Hollen E. Day. to cultivate.

DEPARTMENT OF OHIO. In his last General Orders, Department Commander E. E. Nutt bestows well-merited praise upon Department President Sarah D. Winans and the entire Buckeye Department, W.R.C., in the following:

"In addition, a grateful acknowledgment is due for many courtesies and valuable assistance rendered the Grand Army by Department President and staff of W.R.C., and by their many members found in every locality. Perfect harmony prevails throughout these Departments." WASHINGTON AND ALASKA.
